Kids Break Cycles of Abuse: Adoption Professional Reaps Vicarious Rewards
by Claudia Hutchison

Recent contacts by two of our state’s older placed kids, now adults, served to remind me that most adopted children do grow into responsible citizens, in spite of abhorrent early histories and subsequent challenges to their adoptive parents. In fact, recent research indicates it is the lack of permanency, not the extent of abuse and neglect, which undermines a young person’s ability to function well in society.

Here are my young visitors’ stories: (names changed for privacy):

- Kevin, age 27, just returned to Oregon from a three month volunteer stint at an orphanage in Mexico, where he significantly improved both his mastery of Spanish and the quality of life for the young residents there. Under the loving guidance of the family who adopted him at age 13, Kevin has blossomed into an intelligent, moral, articulate gentleman any parent would be proud to call their son.

- After estrangement in her late teens from her adoptive parents, Suzanne returned - alone, frightened, and pregnant, to seek her family’s assistance. Fast forward ten years - Suzanne (age 30) has completed her associates’ degree, holds a responsible position in a medical office, and enjoys a healthy relationship with her son and her entire adoptive family. She is a valued participant in church and civic activities.

As my term at ORPARC draws to a close with my retirement this month, I wish to thank the wonderful families I have been so honored to serve. You have inspired me, humbled me, and amazed me by your commitment, energy, and unconditional love for the children placed into your safe keeping. For those of you struggling, my hope is that you will focus on the long term perspective - most of “our kids” do stabilize eventually. (Remember, the literature on prenatal alcohol exposure suggests improved outcomes in the late twenties.) Young people who have families to turn to fare best. Please don’t ever give up - even if your child must live elsewhere for a time.

My future plans include a few years’ residency in Costa Rica with my husband Don. We look forward to improving our Spanish and our golf game, and to seeking volunteer opportunities to strengthen local educational and social services. After September I can be reached at claudiah@adoptionconsulting.net.

Best wishes!

Farewell for Claudia Hutchison

Please stop by the ORPARC office the afternoon of Thursday, September 22nd, 3:00 to 6:00 p.m. to say goodbye to Claudia, our Program Manager. Punch, coffee and pre-dinner snacks served. Children most welcome.

Adoption Awareness in the Schools

Be prepared to start fresh with your child’s new teacher. ORPARC’s Adoption Awareness in the Schools packet consists of materials that will help your child’s teacher to be more inclusive when discussing families and giving assignments related to adoption. You will also learn to communicate with your child’s teacher in a way that will encourage cooperation. Call ORPARC to receive a packet to share with your child’s teacher.
Adoption Support Groups – First Line of Defense

ORPARC recently received this plea for help: “We need an emergency respite care placement for our son TODAY! We are exhausted and burned-out…”

Adoptive parents involved in support groups rarely reach this kind of crisis point. Why?

- Support group participants develop informal respite care exchanges.
- Support group parents learn about resources BEFORE they need them.
- Other adoptive parents provide appropriate empathy and helpful suggestions.
- Participants meet other parents who truly understand their unique challenges and frustrations.

Adoptive parent groups are often the first line of defense against parental burn-out and failed adoptions. Support groups can take on varied formats. Here are some of the variations in Oregon:

- A group in Pendleton met for years at a local church that donated their space, with child care provided on site. At the end of each session, the children would join the group for a 20-minute “snack time.” This opportunity for parents to meet and interact with each other’s kids led to some natural respite care exchanges and play dates.

- Curry County has had adoptive/foster parent get-togethers for the purpose of sharing resources along with encouragement. After an initial planning session last summer, several parents exchanged phone numbers and emails, and later connected to exchange baby care equipment, to set up kids’ play dates, and to ask each other about community resources.

- Hood River adoptive/foster parents meet monthly at the DHS office for educational seminars and support. DHS provides the meeting space and on site childcare. The local faith community lends support by providing dinners which church volunteers prepare and deliver. Twelve churches each sign up for a meal a year. Busy parents appreciate the convenience of being able to “just go.” No worries about preparing dinner first for themselves or their kids, or finding a babysitter.

- Washington County—Sharing of “Collective Wisdom.” A dedicated panel of 5 adoptive parents has formed “Adoptive Parents Network,” a resource for families who have adopted or are in the process of adopting through DHS. The group provides listening, support, sharing of experiences and guidance. The forum is relaxed and flexible, but also periodically hosts guest speakers.

ORPARC staff is available to assist in the start-up of new groups. We have several materials available that address development and continued success of adoptive parent groups.

ORPARC can provide mini-trainings to your adoption support group. Sample topics:

- Self Care for Busy Adoptive Parents
- Recruiting and Training Respite Care Providers
- Sex Education for Adoptive Families
- Lifetstory Books
- Fetal Alcohol Syndrome/Effects
- Family Strategies to Promote Attachment
- Adoption and School Issues
- Raising Children in Multi-Cultural Homes
- Positive Parenting with Challenging Kids
Oregon Adoptive Parent Support Groups

ORPARC recommends that you contact the support group to verify meeting information.

Respite Care for Oregon Families

Every county has a Lifespan Respite Care Coordinator to assist family caregivers in locating appropriate respite care. Contact ORPARC for your local Lifespan Coordinator’s number.

The ARC of Multnomah/Clackamas has recruited and trained over 50 well qualified respite care providers, who have had criminal background checks, First Aid/CPR, and additional training. Many have degrees in social work and extensive lifetime experience to serve families with behavioral or emotionally challenged children. For more information, contact Nina White at 503-223-7279 or nwhite@thearcmult.org.

A new website for Oregonians with disabilities, and their families, includes a county by county respite provider list: http://www.disabilitycompass.org

New Guide for Kids Raised by their Grandparents

A booklet entitled “Questions to ask yourself: A Book For Kids, Like You, Who Live With Their Grandparents,” helps children answer some of the questions that they and others ask. It contains helpful resources for understanding their own family dynamic. Contact ORPARC to receive this free, non-return item.

NACAC Family Engagement Project
Because Children Need Families

Monday, October 10, 2005  •  9:00 to 11:00 a.m.
Portland Building - Mezzanine Level Auditorium
1120 SW Fifth Avenue, Portland, Oregon

Several young adults and adoptive, foster and kinship caregivers will share their personal stories with an audience of local, state and federal policy leaders and others interested in child welfare. We will also discuss the recommendations of the Pew Commission on Children in Foster Care to improve outcomes for kids.

If you would like to attend, please RSVP to Amy Miller, Juvenile Rights Project via e-mail at amym@jrplaw.org.

This event is co-sponsored by the North American Council on Adoptable Children (NACAC) and the Juvenile Rights Project.

Familias de habla hispana

Un nuevo año de entrenamientos está por empezar. El Centro ha planeado varios entrenamientos para los meses del otoño los cuales son:

- Automantenimiento del estrés
- Abogando por las necesidades educacionales de su niño
- Adopción Transracial
- El Libro de la Vida: Una herramienta de comunicación
- Hablando con los niños acerca de la adopción

Los entrenamientos de arriba se ofrecerán en inglés. Si usted desea asistir a uno de estos entrenamientos y necesita servicio de interpretación/traducción, favor de llamarnos. Le recordamos que tenemos varios recursos en español en nuestra biblioteca. Y varios grupos de apoyo para los padres de habla hispana están mencionados en la página insertada de este boletín. Llámennos al número 503-241-0799 o 1-800-764-8367 (número gratis) y pregunte por “Miguel” para saber más.
